Hopes to Win Greater Fortune
Than Ever from New Mines
Within Two Years.

CALLS BANK RUMORS LIES

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—E. Augustus Heinze, the spectacular young copper miner, whose wealth until recently was estimated at $20,000,000, is today practically ruined financially.

It was admitted last night by one of his representatives who added that Heinze's Charles W. Morse for his downfall, but hoped to rehabilitate himself in two years and win from new mines in the West a fortune larger than the one he has just lost.

The announcement that the Heinze mine had failed, as the only condition on which it would be sold to the owners of the Morse-Heinze Mercantile National Bank on the reorganization of the entire board of directors of that institution, caused a sensation in Wall Street greater than any that has been experienced there since the announcement of the collapse of the Union copper firm.

It was regarded as most significant and was interpreted as a sign that the speculative element, to quote a Wall Street expression, was taken. It was also a warning that the copper boom would be driven out of that market.

The announcement was made after the clearing house committee had been in session for hours.

Other Banks Discussed

It is understood that the condition of certain other banks in the city which Heinze and Morse are interested in is not so good as could be hoped for. An estimate of the condition of the Union National Bank, a representative of the clearing house committee, was made under conditions of extreme secrecy.

It was ascertained that the clearing house committee had been in session for several days, and that the condition of the Union National Bank was not so good as could be hoped for. It was also ascertained that the clearing house committee had been in session for several days, and that the condition of the Union National Bank was not so good as could be hoped for.

Ridgely Accepts Place

Mr. Ridgely has accepted the presidency of the Mercantile National Bank, and will take the place of Mr. Morse, who has been forced to resign. Daring Heinze Crashed By Boy Who Sold Peanuts

J. AUGUSTUS HEINZE. CHARLES W. MORSE.

Copper king of Montana and former Bath, Me., boy who has worsted him in sensational financial battle.

How two meteoric financial careers have crossed together when their paths toward their common goal—money—converged, and how Charles W. Morse, once a penniless boy, and a poor bookkeeper at $600 a year, of Bath, Me., crashed and crashed upon the banks of J. Augustus Heinze, the young man who looked and talked like a fortune teller, and who sold peanuts in the streets of New England, is the story of the crash of the Heinze mine, now a new king in the West.

Morse, the head of the $600,000,000 Consolidated Securities Company, the man who made the American Ice Company in 1905 and then let the stock slump only to buy it in the winter and resell it at a profit of $100,000,000, then sold out with enormous profits after the stock, which had been first $40, then $100, and finally $200, warranted his mind, has not been in the city for several days. Augustus Heinze, the young copper king who is but thirty-seven years of age, lost by Morse, a man but a few years his senior and who, like Heinze, is a self-made man and self-made millionaire of modern methods.

At present the battle is all with the man who came down from Bath, Me., where he had been a poor bookkeeper at $600 a year, and who sold peanuts in the streets of New England, is the story of the crash of the Heinze mine, now a new king in the West.

By Boston American Leased Wire.
Here is Artist Harrison Fisher's description of the standard of artistic perfection in women—the American type of beauty:

Hair, light brown.
Eyes, bluish brown.
Complexion, fair, slight color.
Height, 5 feet 6 inches.
These characteristics, topped off with a fairly well-developed chin, medium brow, firm lips and a rounded oval contour of the face, are the American type.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—The American woman beautiful?

As against the statement of Maxon Forster, the eminent Frenchman, that the American type of beauty is the most perfect type of beauty, the well-known American artist, Harrison Fisher, declares that in a portrait of a woman, the ideal type of American girl, the artist should find the following characteristics:

She is a New Yorker, a Child, Princess, Fairy and Woman All In One.

Worcester County Producers to Purchase Cans and Sell to Retailers.

TO ENTER BOSTON MARKET

The first act of preparation for competition in the Boston milk market after November is the purchase of milk cans by the milk producers of Worcester county. This shows that they mean business, at least that at the end of this month the milk contractors of Boston will have to divide the market they have monopolized so long.

The producers will send their milk to Boston and sell it directly to the milk peddlers themselves at cut rates.

The ownership of the cans in which it is carried is one of the means

They are satisfied now that the contractors will not come to their terms, and the plans for competition will be announced at a mass meeting of the producers.

The Worcester County men say that the railroad furnish enough milk to supply for twenty to thirty per cent. of the Boston market. They will cut prices, and the farmers will not stand for it.
